KEELER OBENSHAIN MOVES ITS HARRISONBURG OFFICE

Keeler Obenshain is pleased to announce the February 28, 2005 relocation of its Harrisonburg office to 90 North Main Street, just one block north of its former location at 111 East Market Street.

The move follows a renovation of a dated and underutilized downtown building located at the corner of Main and Elizabeth Streets, a process that started in the spring of 2004. Designed by architects John Mather and George Schmidheiser and constructed by Nielsen Construction, the renovation saw the complete gutting and build-out of the early nineteenth century building. Lisa Hawkins, a commercial real estate attorney with Keeler Obenshain who is on the Board of Harrisonburg Downtown Renaissance and who represents developers active in downtown revitalization efforts said that, "Keeler Obenshain looked for an opportunity to participate in downtown revitalization and is happy to play a part in renewing this building's identity as one of Court Square's cornerstones."

The building's architectural features include an abundance of new windows, resurfacing of the building's exterior, and reorientation of the building's entrance to center points on the north and south sides. Inside, a glass and pillared pass-through atrium provides spacious stair and elevator access to the upstairs suite of Keeler Obenshain offices. Deb Mitchell of Interiors by Reflection, the interior decorator for the project, amplified the effect of the building's many windows with well-placed glass and lights, clean-lined furnishings, natural wood flooring and a palate of serene colors, combining aesthetics and function for Keeler Obenshain's 22 attorneys, paralegals and staff.

Keeler Obenshain will have several designated client parking spaces in the parking lot between the 90 North Main building and WHSV-TV3. Additional parking is available at the Elizabeth Street parking garage located almost directly behind the renovated building.

Keeler Obenshain makes this move just one month after opening its third office in Richmond. With offices in Charlottesville, Harrisonburg and Richmond and a client-centric, entrepreneurial approach, Keeler Obenshain is well-positioned to serve business and individual clients throughout Virginia and in West Virginia. Keeler Obenshain's growth has reflected its commitment to quality, with all 12 of its partners named among Virginia Business magazine's "Legal Elite."
